AREAS OF PRACTICE INDEX

LOCALITY GUIDE INDEX

The following referral booklet provides you with easy access to Counselling Psychologists in your local community. Counselling Psychologists are registered Medicare and private health fund providers.

This booklet is linked to our website (www.counsellingpsychologists.org), with a search function to help you find Counselling Psychologists in specific regions or to identify practitioners with a specific interest or expertise. You will find a guide to areas of practice and locality in the index.

Counselling Psychology

Counselling Psychology is the second largest of the nine areas of practice endorsement, recognised by the Psychology Board of Australia. Endorsement of a psychologist's registration is a legal mechanism under the National Law to identify practitioners who have an additional qualification and advanced supervised practice recognised by the Psychology Board of Australia.

Counselling Psychologists provide assessment, formulation, diagnosis and psychotherapy to individuals, couples, families, children and groups, and work in a wide range of settings, including private practice, GP clinics, hospitals, sexual abuse treatment and support services, military and veteran’s support, prisons, child protection, peri-natal mental health centres, relationship centres, and in a variety of other community agencies.
Association of Counselling Psychologists

The Association of Counselling Psychologists (ACP) is an independent representative body for Counselling Psychologists in Australia. For the past 23 years the ACP has been addressing the needs of our members, referring practitioners and people in the community who require the expertise of a Counselling Psychologist.

All practitioners in this booklet are members of the ACP and are Counselling Psychologists with an area of practice endorsement (section 1), or a Registered Psychologist (who has completed a Masters of Counselling Psychology), and may be working towards the area of practice endorsement (section 2).

If you have any queries, or would like to request more copies of the booklet, please contact us at counsellingpsychologists@gmail.com or visit our website at www.counsellingpsychologists.org

Dr Catriona Davis-McCabe (Chair)
Counselling Psychologist
Association of Counselling Psychologists
What is a Counselling Psychologist?

Counselling Psychologists use their knowledge and understanding of psychology, psychotherapy, and mental health to treat a wide range of psychological problems, and mental health disorders. Counselling Psychologists provide assessment, formulation, diagnosis and psychotherapy for individuals, couples, families and groups across the lifespan. Counselling Psychologists use evidence-based therapies to assist clients to resolve mental health disorders or psychological problems and move toward greater psychological health. They research, evaluate, and develop new methods for improving psychological health and therapeutic interventions for psychological disorders.

The minimum standard of training for a Counselling Psychologist is 8 years, including accredited post-graduate training through a Masters, Doctorate, or PhD in Counselling Psychology, followed by supervised practice in the field. Counselling Psychologists are rigorously assessed for their competence with a particular focus on managing complex and challenging cases.

Counselling Psychologists receive advanced training in psychopathology to work with a wide range of complex psychological problems and disorders such as depression, anxiety, self-esteem, eating disorders, post-traumatic stress and personality disorders. They also assist people with challenging or prolonged difficulties encountered in the usual course of living, such as bereavement, intimacy issues, relationship breakdown, transition to parenthood, attachment issues, adjustment to step-parenting, involuntary redundancy, sexual assault or abuse, or release from prison. Counselling Psychologists work in a wide range of settings, including private practice, GP clinics, hospitals, sexual abuse treatment and support services, military and veteran’s support, prisons, child protection, peri-natal mental health centres, relationship centres, and in a variety of other community agencies.

Individual Psychotherapy

Counselling Psychologists are trained in a wider range of psychotherapy techniques than any other area of endorsement. This includes a diverse range of evidence-based therapies and common treatment factors. They frequently provide eclectic or integrative treatments inclusive of but not limited to, cognitive-behaviour therapy, interpersonal therapy, brief dynamic, psychodynamic and existential psychotherapy. Counselling Psychologists tailor their therapeutic approach to meet the unique needs of individual clients, paying close attention to aligning treatment with the context of a specific case, and the personal values and meaning system of the individual client.
Couple and Family Therapy

Counselling psychologists provide assessment, formulation, interventions and treatment to families across the lifespan. They assist people with difficult transitions in relationships that create adjustment issues, such as forming a new relationship, having children, and ageing. They are competent in attachment-based approaches that facilitate understanding of interpersonal dynamics. Treatment is directed towards developing greater satisfaction and wellbeing by improving communication, developing emotional and physical intimacy, resolving conflict and respecting individual differences.

Counselling psychologists recognise and treat complex presentations that injure interpersonal relationships, working with people to facilitate understanding and minimise distress to significant others.

Group Therapy

Counselling psychologists also receive in-depth training in the delivery of group-based psychotherapies. They are skilled in the design and facilitation of groups for both psycho-education and therapeutic purposes. Across a range of settings and client populations, Counselling Psychologists develop and apply group interventions tailored to the specific needs of agencies, programs, and individuals seeking support.
